

The goose was feeding on a fairway with a flock of Canada geese. The goose was all white with black wingtips. We decided this was a Snow Goose rather than a Ross's Goose because of its relative size in relation to the Canada geese and the long neck of the observed bird.